MAT KNEAVEN SUICIDE

By the Carbolic Acid Route—
Found Dead in the Suburbs of Glasgow Wednesday.

Mat Kneaven committed suicide at Glasgow Wednesday by swallowing about two ounces of carbolic acid. The city marshal was after him with a warrant sworn out on account of a difficulty he had raised with his family and he fled, escaping to the city limits where he swallowed the poison and shuffled off his mortal coil hurriedly.

He was a son-in-law of Fred Linnemann of the Forest Green neighborhood and had been working around over the country wherever he could obtain employment until his return some time since to his home in Glasgow.

The coroner held an inquest and a jury found in accordance with the above facts.
